When it comes to operating safely this winter, we're all in.

While we still don't know exactly what the landscape will look like, we're fully committed to opening safely for Sugarloaf's 70th winter season. With over 1000 acres of terrain, our resort naturally lends itself to social distancing, and although many things will be different this winter, we are confident that we will be able to provide a safe environment for you to enjoy the mountain. Outlined at <https://www.sugarloaf.com/winter-operations> you will find details on our plans for different areas of resort operation, and we encourage you to review all of this information prior to visiting us this winter.

We're excited to get back on the mountain, and we look forward to seeing you here.
